THE following Hymn was set to Music at the desire of some friends, as a companion to the DIES IRAE, printed in 1799. The learned in the art will perceive, that I have not attempted any intricate and laborious work, but rather made it the means of recreation in hours of leisure. I did not venture to commit it to the press, until it had undergone the revision, and received the approbation, of some of the most eminent in the profession, and I hope it will not be found altogether unworthy of the notice of the lovers of devotional music. The vocal parts are easy and the accompaniment requires only correctness, and a little good taste.

It was my intention, from a hint given me, to have marked the time in English terms, but I found, that I could not render them as concise and intelligible as the usual Italian terms are to most performers, which must be my apology for what might otherwise appear pedantic. In some places the particular instruments are mentioned, as introduced into the full score.

If the Pianoforte alone accompanies the Voices in the first Chorus, it may be best, at pages 5, 7 and 8, where long holding notes occur in the upper parts, to play the semiquavers below, as the voices support the harmony; but if a good Violin is added, the Pianoforte will produce a better Effect, by continuing the upper part in chords, broken into semiquavers.

The verses, "O the rich Glories, &c." page 13, and, "Hallelujah leads the Song, &c." page 26, may be sung in the style of recitatives, the accompaniment giving way to the Singer.

To give to the whole its due Effect, a devotional style of singing and playing is requisite, which will not fail to pervade the performance, if the Subject be first duly considered; and if, by this composition, I have in the least contributed to impress upon the minds of those, who honour it with their attention and perusal, a deeper sense of the importance of things eternal, such as the Hymn describes, I shall consider my time profitably spent, and myself richly rewarded. I shall also rejoice to have added my feeble Efforts towards promoting that grand purpose, for which this heavenly science was originally designed, and will hereafter be solely employed.

A SHORT account of the origin of this Anthem, may perhaps not be unacceptable and likewise serve as an apology for its appearance before the public.

IN the beginning of October 1809, I went to Runcorn in Cheshire, to visit a near relation, at whose table the conversation of some friends turned on the most proper mode of celebrating the approaching JUBILEE of His Majesty's Reign, at Fairfield near Manchester, the place of their residence. We all agreed, that our best exertions should be used, to show that unfeigned gratitude, which we, with all our fellow-subjects, owe to GOD, for prolonging the life and reign of so GOOD a KING.

A PROPOSAL was accordingly made to solemnize the service appointed for that day, by the performance of an Anthem suited to the occasion, and nothing would satisfy the company present, but a composition entirely new; that appearing to them better calculated to distinguish a Festival of so extraordinary a description, than anything already in use. The task devolved upon me, nor could I prevail upon them to adopt a selection from the Works of some truly great and favourite Masters, though calculated to afford a much better musical demonstration of our loyal and grateful sentiments.

FINDING myself overcome by their arguments in favour of an Anthem, expressly composed for this solemnity, though I regretted my inability to do justice to a subject so grand, I promised to furnish one or two pieces. But having chosen the Twenty-first Psalm, in all respects so remarkably appropriate, it was impossible to enter into the spirit of that sublime Song of Praise without rapture and increasing diligence, and on my return to Fairfield, I presented my friends with the following composition. It met with their approbation, as being within the reach of their abilities, and was introduced into a solemn service, on the day of JUBILEE. To satisfy those who wish to possess a copy, I have ventured to publish it in this form, adapting the instrumental parts for the pianoforte.

THE haste in which this Anthem was required to be completely ready for use, must be my apology for what may seem not sufficiently studied. Had I even been better qualified for it, I had no time to indulge in elaborate and ingenious composition, which however, on this occasion, I do not regret; for though it might have furnished more amusement to myself, and more matter for critical inspection, yet it would have been less likely to produce effect, by being more difficult to perform.

THE simplicity of the musical subjects, all of which occurred to my mind at the moment, and were adopted, without much examination or search after novelty, rendered the composition the sooner understood by a band of dilettanti; and, by patient and willing exertion, my musical friends at Fairfield became well acquainted with every part of it, so as not to be taken by surprize at the performance.

SOME professors are apt to imagine, that they are equal to the task of performing anything at first sight. Being seldom interested in the success of the performance, rehearsals are generally neglected, and the Composer loses the only opportunity afforded him, of explaining the manner, in which he wishes his work to be exhibited. A band of dilettanti therefore, with but moderate abilities in sustaining the respective parts, is more likely to succeed, by more readily submitting to directions. Thus the advantage is sometimes given to a work of inferior merit, when one, far superior in its structure, totally fails in execution, even under more skilful hands, for want of sufficient preparation.

THE zeal manifested by every individual contributing his part towards solemnizing this happy day at Fairfield, pervaded likewise the performance of the Anthem, and added to the general effect; and to this alone I ascribe its acceptance with the audience. As to its intrinsic merit, I leave that to the candid judgment of those, who favour it with their perusal, and humbly hope, that many, who fear GOD and honour the KING, will not be dissatisfied with this feeble attempt, to join in the general voice of thanksgiving.

LONDON, Dec. 1*st*, 1809.

ANTHEM.

PSALM XXI. VERSE 1. The King shall joy in thy strength,

CORO. O Lord; and in thy salvation; how greatly shall he rejoice!

2. Thou hast given him his hearts desire, and hast not with holden the request of his lips.

3. For thou preventest him with the blessings of goodness, thou settest a crown of pure gold upon his head.

A 4 VOCE. 4. He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even length of days, for ever and ever.

DUETTO. DUE TENORI. 5. His glory is great in thy salvation; honour and majesty hast thou laid upon him.

6. For thou hast made him most blessed for ever: thou hast made him exceeding glad with thy countenance.

CORO. 7. For the King trusteth in the Lord; and through the mercy of the Most High, he shall not be moved.

ARIA. BASSO CON CORO. 8. Thine hand shall find out all thine enemies, thy right-hand shall find out them that hate thee.

11. For they intended evil against thee; they imagined a mischievous device, which they are not able to perform.

PSALM XX. VERSE 6. Now I know that the Lord saveth

ARIA. his anointed: he will hear him from his holy heaven with the saving strength of his right-hand.

SOPRANO. CON CORO. 7. Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the Lord our God!

PSALM XXI. VERSE 13. Be thou exalted, Lord! in thine own

CORO. strength; so will we sing and praise thy power.

NB. The accompanying Instruments are marked at the beginning of each separate piece.

SONG OF DAVID,

in DAVID & GOLIAH, a SACRED DRAMA,

by Mrs. Hannah More.

Teach me to bless my lowly Lot
Confin'd to this paternal Cot,
Remote from regal State;
Content to court the cooling glade,
Inhale the breeze, enjoy the Shade,
And love my humble fate .

No anxious Vigils here I keep,
No dreams of Gold distract my Sleep,
Nor lead my heart astray;
Nor blasting envy's tainted gale
Pollutes the pleasures of the Vale,
To vex my harmless day .

Yon tower which rears its head so high,
And bids defiance to the Sky,
Invites the hostile winds;
Yon branching Oak, extending wide
Provokes destruction by its pride,
And courts the fall it finds .

Then let me shun th' ambitious deed,
And all the dang'rous paths, which lead
To honors falsely won:
Lord in thy sure protection blest,
Submissive will I ever rest,
And all thy will be done !

Ode to Peace.

By William Cowper Esq.r

Vol. I. page 310.

For thee I panted, thee I priz'd,
For thee, I gladly sacrific'd
What e'er I lov'd before;
And shall I see thee start away,
And helpless, hopeless, hear thee say,
Farewell, we meet no more!

Some foe to his upright intent,
Finds out his weaker part,
Virtue engages his assent,
But pleasure wins his heart,
Tis here the folly of the wise
Thro' all his art we view
And while the tongue the charge denies,
His Conscience owns it true!

Bound on a Voy'ge of awful length,
And dangers little known,
A Stranger to superior Strength,
Man Vainly trusts his own,
But oars a lone can ne'er prevail,
To reach the distant Coast,
The breath of heav'n must swell the Sail
Or all the Toil is lost!
